Mortgage Rates Little-Changed Despite Market Volatility

Mortgage rates stayed fairly close to yesterday's levels as underlying bond markets experienced some volatility throughout the course of the day. If mortgage lenders were forced to create rate sheets earlier in the morning, things would have looked very good at around 6am this morning. Financial markets were still reacting to yesterday's after-hours news of Gary Cohn's resignation. This resulted in stocks and bond yields moving lower.

Markets were more willing to get back to business today, with stocks and bond yields ("rates") rising together at 9:30am. By the end of the day, both had returned in line with yesterday's latest levels. This not only leaves mortgage rates in roughly the same territory, but it also suggests the downtrend in stocks and rates that began in late February is potentially over. Mortgage borrowers should already be favoring locking vs floating in 2018, but today's trading reinforces that stance.

About Casey Sullivan

Casey is a dedicated and dependable mortgage loan officer. His clients count on him to be their skilled, experienced, and focused consultant, listening to their needs.

He skillfully assists his clients with both refinancing and home purchases in California and more specifically the San Francisco Bay Area.

His vision is to build lifetime relationships with each client as their mortgage consultant...for life! He stays connected with each client well after closing which includes loan reviews and dependable market updates.

Casey believes that everyone deserves to completely understand their mortgage financing options and that one size does not fit all when it comes to mortgages. Nor does it apply when it comes to mortgage lenders. All lenders are not made the same and they are not all equal.
