A Message from Ted Rood:

"More domestic and global economic gloom continues to help rates. Great time to buy a home or refinance!"

UPDATE: Under Pressure After Opening Strong, but Resilient

The overnight session was stellar for bond markets. Right out of the gate, news of Japans surprise rate cut (into negative territory) gave bond markets a big boost. European trading only added momentum to the rally. Sliding oil prices were initially helpful at that time, but began moving higher before the New York session began.

As it happened, rising oil prices and stabilizing equities prices put an end to the bond rally right at the start of the domestic trading day. 10yr yields crossed the 8am threshold at 1.918 and Fannie 3.0s began the day at 102-04.

Both weakened gradually from there. Data has generally been a non-event when it comes to that weakening with the possible exception of a very strong Chicago PMI report putting some pressure on bonds. The stock rally is adding to that pressure somewhat.

But even then, bonds have been resilient near their weakest levels. 10yr yields only briefly broke above 1.95 and are now back down to 1.942. We can continue to watch 1.95 as a line in the sand that can alert us to a breakdown in that supportive tone. At the moment, with bonds clawing back despite stocks being at the highs of the day, there's reason to be hopeful. Question the hope if we get pushed back over 1.95.

On a final note, keep in mind that today is 'month-end,' so we could be seeing additional incremental benefits from that. We can't really know until we see how trading comes out next week, but it's a risk that might temper some enthusiasm over today's resilience.

Responsive service, experienced expertise

I've dedicated my 22 year mortgage career to client education, superior service, and honest answers. The lending landscape has changed dramatically the past few years, and continues to do so. My job is to ensure client partners' loans close quickly, without surprises, and I take that responsibility very seriously. Referrals are a responsibility I appreciate; they're a measure of trust, and that trust must be earned every day, on every referral.
