Mortgage Applications Waned in Run-up to Holiday

Whether they were concerned about the possibility of rising rates or merely clearing the decks in anticipation of the last week of psychological summer, mortgage applications surged during the week ended August 28, but lost most of their energy this past week.

The Mortgage Bankers Association reported that its Market Composite Index, a measure of application volume dropped 6.2 percent on a seasonally adjusted basis during the week ended September 4, and by 7 percent on an unadjusted basis. It was the first time since the week ended July 10 that the seasonally adjusted index had declined.

The Refinance Index decreased 10 percent from the previous week and the share of applications for refinancing fell from 58.7 percent of total applications to 56.9 percent. The seasonally adjusted Purchase Index dipped by 1 percent while the unadjusted Purchase Index decreased 3 percent compared with the previous week and was 41 percent higher than the same week one year ago. MBA said that that year-over-year number is inflated because Labor Day was a week later this year than last.

MBA derives application data from its Weekly Mortgage Application Survey which it has conducted since 1990. The survey covers over 75 percent of all U.S. retail residential mortgage applications with respondents that include mortgage bankers, commercial banks and thrifts. Base period and value for all indexes is March 16, 1990=100. Rate information presumes a loan with an 80 percent loan-to-value ratio and with points that include the origination fee.

Responsive service, experienced expertise

I've dedicated my 22 year mortgage career to client education, superior service, and honest answers. The lending landscape has changed dramatically the past few years, and continues to do so. My job is to ensure client partners' loans close quickly, without surprises, and I take that responsibility very seriously. Referrals are a responsibility I appreciate; they're a measure of trust, and that trust must be earned every day, on every referral.
